Our Experience

With Marsden's 67+ years of service, we understand the day-to-day demands of keeping your workplace clean, safe, and healthy. We also understand emergency and hazardous cleaning challenges. Our past experience in times of great challenges with H1N1 (Swine Flu), Bird Flu, and SARS along with natural disasters have taught us invaluable lessons that position us to help you navigate the developing novel Coronavirus (COVID-19) pandemic. We are grateful to serve you and we offer our expertise now and as you need it. By working together, we can deliver calming assurances and services to help you control the impact of this pandemic.

Caring for your Workplace

In response to COVID-19, we have taken additional measures to ensure our cleaning and security protocols bring the utmost discipline and care for your workplace. Marsden has certified Health Care Specialists and experts on staff. Our Marsden Restoration division is keeping busy responding to hazardous clean-ups. We have engaged additional consultation with local and national health authorities such as Industrial Hygienists, HHS, the CDC, and the WHO. Our continued communications with these organizations enable Marsden to offer continued assurance and specialized services to help you maintain the safest and healthiest environments possible under these conditions.

Our teams are receiving on-going briefings, trainings, and expertly developed and enhanced operating protocols. We have activated our local and national response teams to be ready to provide additional cleaning and disinfection services. Should you alert us to a case of Coronavirus or find need for deeper levels of cleaning and disinfection at any of your properties, we are prepared to act swiftly to meet your needs.
